ADP Deliberative Dialogue Institute

This institute will be led by Steven Koether, foundations of science coordinator, Sam Houston State University (Texas); Kara Lindaman, professor of political science and public administration, Winona State University (Minn.); and Harriet Steinbach, assistant director, Center for Civic Engagement, Illinois State University.

The goals for this institute are to:
- Explain the purpose and value of a deliberative dialogue
- Encourage deliberation as a mechanism for a healthy democracy
- Utilize provided resources and strategies for campus dialogue and deliberation
- Gain knowledge to customize and adapt materials and resources for courses, programs, and campus needs

There is no cost for this pilot institute, and we encourage teams from campuses to participate.

We have finalized the times for these sessions as follows:
- March 19 from 2–4 p.m. ET (required session)
- March 26 from 2–4 p.m. ET (required session)
- April 2 from 2–3 p.m. (not required; general “office hours” session)
- April 9 from 2–3 p.m. ET (not required; general “office hours” session)
- April 16 from 2–4 p.m. ET (required session)
- April 23 from 2–3/3–4/4–5 p.m. ET (not required; optional special interest sessions)

If you are able to attend the three required sessions (on March 19, 26, and April 16) and would like to join, please email Cathy Copeland, ADP program coordinator. Registration will close at 30 participants. We will contact the registrants with more information at the end of February.
